Integrity and Office

Towards the end of our Parasha, (Vaykra 24, 1-9) Hashem directs the service of the Menorah and Shulchan, which stand just before the curtain in the Mishkan separating the “Holies” from the “holy of holies”, containing the Ark. Every Shabbat, Aaron is to ensure that a dozen fresh and specially shaped loaves, the Lechem HaPanim, translated as Showbread or “Shewbread” are stacked in two piles of six on the golden table. Every Shabbat, the old loaves, which are described as Kodesh Kedoshim, are taken down to be eaten by the Cohanim.

The light of the Menorah, representing wisdom and spiritual blessing, shines upon the loaves, representing physical endeavour and sustenance.

The Talmud (Yoma 38a) singles out the Garmu family of bakers for criticism. The did not want to teach the secrets of the dozen unleavened loaves, which remained fresh and unbroken for a week. As we recall from Pesach, it is hard enough to keep our flat matza fresh and unbroken once it is open!

Angrily, the sages sacked the Garmu family, replacing them with craftsmen from Alexandria in Egypt, but they failed on both counts. The House of Garmu returned, having negotiated double their original salary for their return.

Jolted by this demand, the sages ask the Garmu about their monopoly, why they had not passed on the tradition and operated a closed shop. They responded that they were concerned for the time after the Temple’s destruction, that unscrupulous survivors shouldn’t share the skill with idolaters who would then sell knock-off Showbread. In the absence of the Temple, the world shouldn’t feel that the flavours of godliness had been opened up to the masses.

The passage continues to praise the Garmu. מְעוֹלָם לֹא נִמְצְאָת פֶּת נִקְיָה בַּיָּד בְּנֵיהֶם “never was there found refined bread of fine flour in their hands, or those of their families”. Even though they were master craftsmen, they only ever ate bread of coarse flour and bran. No one should say of them, that they had profited from their privilege or office. One should stand clean before God and Israel (Bemidbar 32:22)

Lest one wonder at the extortion of a double salary. It was for that week alone and so that the Garmu did not lose out on the wages they had lost when the Alexandrian bakers had been brought in. Employers shouldn’t threaten their staff with the menace that “no one is indispensable!”

Criticism of those holding high office is as old as time. The motives for those seeking power, privilege or prominence have always been questioned. Praise goes to those who conduct themselves modestly and transparently, who are open do not appear to profit from the public purse.

Shabbat Shalom

Return to Jerusalem

Sunday Night 9th May and Monday (10th) will be Yom Yerushalayim (28th Iyar). This week we have three very special events to honour the occasion.

This Monday evening (Bank Holiday) at 8pm, Rabbi Dr Ari Zivotovsky will guide us through some of the latest discoveries in Ir David and the Old City of Jerusalem.

On Wednesday evening at 8pm I will be in conversation with the Israeli Ambassador, Tzipi Hotovely. Tzipi was the youngest member of the Knesset elected in 2009, becoming Deputy Foreign Minister in 2015. She has been Ambassador to the UK since August 2020.

On Sunday 9th we will hear from Nadia Cohen, the widow of Eli Cohen, the Mossad operative who penetrated the heart of the Syrian establishment, who was captured and executed in May 1965. Nadia continues to campaign for the return of his remains.

The great medieval philosopher, physician and poet Yehuda Halevi (1075-1141) wrote from Toledo of his yearning to see Jerusalem.

MY HEART IS IN THE EAST

*My heart is in the east, and I in the uttermost west—
How can I find savour in food? How shall it be sweet to me?*

*How shall I render my vows and my bonds, while yet
Zion lieth beneath the fetter of Edom, and I in Arab chains?*

A light thing would it seem to me to leave all the good things of Spain—

Seeing how precious in mine eyes to behold the dust of the desolate sanctuary.

In 1140 he journeyed to Alexandria, and visited his great contemporaries, Shmuel HaNagid and Shmuel ben Chanania. He wrote of his voyage:

*I cry out to God with a melting heart and knees that strike against each other,
While anguish is in all loins,*

*When even the pilots find not their hands.
How shall I be otherwise, since I, on a ship's deck,
Suspended between the waters and the heavens,
Am dancing and tossed about?
But this is merely a light thing,
If I may eventually hold a joyous dance in the midst of you, O Jerusalem!*

Halevi made a personal pilgrimage and intended to live out his days in the spiritual splendour of Jerusalem. Moses Hess (1812-1875) was amongst the earliest to advocate a mass return to Zion, advocating the purchase of the lands from the Ottomans. Dubbed “the Red Rabbi” and a friend of Marx and Engels, Hess saw this both as a solution to the anti-Semitism in Europe, and also as a Messianic fulfilment of purpose.

“Even today the wholesome influence of the Jewish family life is noticeable in literature, art and science. How much greater will that influence be when once again we create history and literature, when once more the Torah will go forth from Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem?” (Hess, Rome and Jerusalem)

On 28th Iyar 4901, exactly 880 years ago, Halevi set sail for Israel. That date is our last confirmed point of contact with him. The assumption is that he arrived. There is an unsubstantiated rumour that he travelled to Jerusalem, where, as he davened at the Kotel, an Arab horseman ran him down. This tragic legend is referenced at the beginning of his celebrated 1967 poem “The Paratroopers Cry” by Chaim Hefer, one of the soldiers who retook the Kotel.

*This Kotel has heard many prayers
This Kotel has seen many walls fall
This Kotel has felt wailing women's hands and notes
pressed between its stones
This Kotel has seen Rabbi Yehuda HaLevi trampled in front of it
This Kotel has seen Caesars rising and falling
But this Kotel has never before seen paratroopers cry...*

Looking forward to seeing you in shul and online.
