In this week's Parsha, we read of the B'nei Yisroel's reconnaissance mission to spy on the land of Israel and its disastrous result. After waiting forty days for the return of their delegation, the nation listens to their negative report. The Jews' apprehension turned to despair and fear.

It is important to note that the two spies, Yehoshua and Kalev, who dissented and stayed steadfast in their opposition to the other ten Meraglim did so in different ways.

The Chafetz Chaim explains that there are two different methods by which one can "go against the flow". Some argue, debate and make a lot of noise voicing their disapproval. This has a positive outcome in that it helps fortify one's point of view, yet has an obvious drawback. A sharply worded rejoinder can hurt feelings.

Others might stay silent and keep their objections to themselves as they attempt to re-inforce their resolve and remain strong. This is a lot safer with regards to sensitivity towards others, but also hazardous. The attitudes of those around us eventually rub off and influence our thoughts and behaviour.

Yehoshua belonged to the first group. From the beginning, he denounced the spies and their attitudes. He stayed strong, but Moshe was concerned for his physical well-being. Thus, he added an extra yud to his name as a blessing that he would be saved from harm at the hands of the spies. According to the Chatam Sofer, the 'yud' itself connotes the self-confidence and assertiveness that Yehoshua had in opposing the spies. Yehoshua held his ground, and the spies were unable to affect him spiritually or physically.

Kalev took the second approach. He went along with the spies and did not say a word. When he finally stood up to defend Moshe people stopped to listen. Rashi explains that everyone thought he was on the side of the slanderers.

Kalev realised early in the trip that he would need special help from Hashem to stay strong. According to the Midrash, he went to Chevron and prayed to recharge and rejuvenate his soul. This worked as well.

The Chafetz Chaim writes that both approaches are legitimate. Some of us make a lot of noise, while others are more subtle. That said, both Yehoshua and Kalev could not have done what they did without the blessing from Moshe and the prayers in Chevron. We all require siyata dishmaya (aid from heaven).

A Personal Pilgrimage

Earlier this week I made a 48-hour pilgrimage into my past. I joined my mother on a trip to Wiesbaden, for a commemorative event at the Town Hall in my great-grandfather's honour.

My great grandfather, Heinz (Heinrich) Lewin was born in Wiesbaden in 1888. His parents, Moshe and Chaya, who are buried in the cemetery there, ran a cigarette factory and shop, incidentally, one of the early adopters of promotional football cards. Heinz went into the business, but his passion and talent was music.

By the 1910s, he was a highly regarded composer of dance music and operetta; with success he moved to Berlin and with Nazism he was published under an alias (Henry Letton). He moved into film scores, with film credits in Germany and also America, where Universal Studios re-filmed several German films for local consumption.

During the war he fled to France, was captured and held in the "Spanish Prisoners Camp" at Septfonds, near Toulouse. There are even programmes of concerts he directed there. We have the details of his transport to Auschwitz on 9th September 1942 but no way of knowing if he perished on the journey or was gassed on arrival.

The commemoration was advertised in the local paper and included an account of his life, the playing of his music and in the evening a cinema screening of one of his films, Geheimnis des Blauen Zimmers (The Secret of the Blue Room).

The most moving aspects of the commemoration for me were watching my mother's joy and tears as the music was played; and then hearing her deliver her address in flawless German; a reflection on the grandfather she had never known. As she finished she was greeted with a thoroughly deserved standing ovation.

Many a tear was shed. Participants and journalists who came to speak to me and my mother afterwards apologised, for the fact that racism and anti-Semitism is on the rise again.

The commemoration highlighted one significant lesson: "Us" and "Them" is a story of persecution and death – but as we celebrated Heinz as a German Jewish composer, we told a colourful story of German Jewish life. It was us, our culture and our past...

One story in six million... How many were murdered for whom there are no grandchildren or great grandchildren to take up their cause? Whole villages slaughtered, and no-one knows they were ever born... How many folios of music and manuscripts of wisdom were lost for all time?

I return home, inspired and exhilarated to have come so close to my great grandfather; having prayed at his parents' graves, seen where they lived and worked, where he was born... having heard his music come to life... and understanding all the more how much we have all lost.

Shabbat Shalom

Next week I shall be leading the Kinloss trip to Berlin and then participating in a Roundtable at the Vatican. I thank Rabbi Andrews and Rabbi Laitner for holding the fort in my absence.

THE STATE ROOMS AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE

Buckingham Palace serves as both the office and London residence of Her Majesty The Queen. It is one of the few working royal palaces remaining in the world today.

During a visit to Buckingham Palace, you can see the 19 magnificent State Rooms which provide the setting for ceremonial occasions and official entertaining. All rooms are furnished with many of the greatest treasures from the Royal Collection. The Summer Opening of Buckingham Palace in 2018 will include an exhibition that marks the 70th birthday of The Prince of Wales. Your ticket includes a multimedia guide available in nine languages and also a family-friendly version.

At the end of your visit you can enjoy a walk through the garden to the exit, with splendid views of the Palace and the famous lake.

The State Rooms are fully accessible and we welcome visitors with different access requirements. Special access tickets must be pre-booked – please contact Tika before booking. Wheelchair access and step-free access are available via a separate entrance at the front of the Palace.

Cost of the trip

Adult £21.60, over 60 £19.80

Transportation is not provided. The tour begins at 12pm, the group will meet at 11.45am. Further details provided upon booking.

THIS WEEK'S HAFTORAH BY RABBI ANDREWS

The Haftorah this week, from the second chapter of the Book of Joshua, mirrors the parsha in its focus on Jewish spies. The spies in the Haftorah, whom tradition identifies as Calev (Caleb) and Pinchas, are detected almost as soon as they arrive in the city of Yiricho (Jericho) and are at Rachav's (Rahab) mercy. It is she who saves them from the king's men, gives them the information they need, provides their escape route, and tells them how long to stay hidden before returning to the main camp of the Jewish people.

One might ask the question why the prophet stresses her role so much. Additionally, it seems relevant to note that the prophet also mentions her profession, a "zonah" which Rashi translates the word as "innkeeper". Seeing her as an innkeeper explains why the spies would have found their way to her. The simple understanding of the word, however, has much more negative connotations.

Rachav, then, serves as an example of faith so pure that it overcomes everything about her background, turning her into a model of service of Hashem. She starts out at the beginning of the story on the lowest rung in her society. The Gemorrah in Megillah details her proficiency at this latter profession. That said, the lower she starts out, the more impressive the turnaround her faith brings.

Her determined and complete turn from that life captures our attention. In Tanach (scripture) as a whole, the term "zonah" signifies faithlessness, unwillingness or inability to commit to a relationship. Thus, the contrast between her description and her actions not only surprises us, but it also draws attention to that theme as crucial to the haftarah as a whole. Rachav learns the lesson of Sichon and Og's loss, in sharp contrast to the king and the rest of the inhabitants. She protects the spies, makes a pact to which she adheres, and ensures their safe return so that the message can get back to the rest of the Jewish people.

If you find yourself at Kinloss over the course of the day, please stop by the office to say hello! I can usually be found there during the regular office hours (except Thursday).

Zionist Visionaries Course

Rabbi Lawrence & Rebbitzen Ilana Epstein

100 years ago, most Jews lived in Europe. Today, for the first time in two thousand years or more, the largest Jewish population resides in the Land of Israel. How on earth did this happen?

For two millennia, Jews have concluded every festive meal with a song of lamentation and hope; they would say of the return to Zion, "We were like dreamers!" And indeed that is what it took to galvanise an entire nation to return home. There were dreamers and visionaries who saw so far beyond the norm that they were scorned and mocked.

Today we simply enjoy the fruits of their efforts, but how many of us have ever stopped to think: how did they do it? How did these leaders inspire Jews from all four corners of the globe to leave their homes, brave deserts, beat malaria, defeat enemies, defy international pressure and build sufficient internal cohesion to make the modern State of Israel a thriving country?

The answer is both simple and complex. All of them were master writers and speakers. Their words were graced with a power rarely seen once in a generation, let alone collected and distilled into the ears of a listening people over a mere 50 years.

Join the Rabbi Lawrence and Ilana Epstein for an exploration of the writings and lives of the Visionaries of Modern Zionism. Dive into the passion, rationale, rhetoric, despair and hope of Hess, Pinsker, Herzl, Nordau, Zangwill, Jabotinsky, Gordon and Rabbi Kook – each appealing to a different part of the Jewish world, each a visionary whose sight telescoped beyond the ordinary and reached so far into our own future.

For only if we know the dreams of the past can we learn how much further we ourselves could learn to see.

workbook & £10 per week
