Parashat Toledot – The Love that Goes without Saying

“Yitzchak loved Eisav because the hunt was in his mouth and Rivka loved Yaakov.” (Bereshit 25:28)

וַיֵּאָהֱב יִצְחָק אֶת-עֵשָׂו כִּי-צִיד בְּפִיו וְרִבְקָה אֹהֶבֶת אֶת-יַעֲקֹב:

Does the Torah suggest that somehow Yitzchak & Rivka had a hand in the tension between their children? How could Yitzchak get it so wrong that he favoured the villain of the piece?

While Eisav’s hunting prowess is given as justification for Yitzchak’s love, no reason is given when we are told that Rivka loved Yaakov.

The twelfth century commentator Radak (R’ David Kimchi, Provence, d. 1236) says that of course Yitzchak loved goody-goody Yaakov. Quite literally, that went without saying. The Torah’s focus is Yitzchak’s surprising love of Eisav and reluctance to write off his eldest son. While Eisav is vilified by tradition as a wayward child, he nonetheless found an avenue which made his father proud, honouring him by bringing the delights of the hunt.

By contrast, Rivka’s love for Yaakov is unqualified. She had every reason to love him, and none not to. This was bolstered by the prophecy that God had given her during pregnancy that the elder would eventually serve the younger. Yitzchak represents hope in the leadership qualities he perceives. Rivka represents faith in the leadership she anticipates.

On close reading, “Yitzchak loved Eisav” (in the past tense) contrasts with the Hebrew “Rivka loves Yaakov” (in the present). Yitzchak’s imagination that leadership was synonymous with force and glossing over Eisav’s deficiencies elicited love that existed but elapsed. Rivka’s love, rooted in her faith in Yaakov’s noble qualities, is a love which exists and endures.

Our Torah gives us patriarchs and matriarchs who are real people with real hopes, faults and flaws. If our biblical forebears were only all good or all evil, they would be like Goldilocks’ three bears – fairy-tale characters with nothing much to teach.

Instead, we have a narrative which challenges us to understand and challenges us to learn.

Our Parsha teaches us through Yitzchak that we should look for the positive in people. However, we should not blind ourselves to their flaws or the need for admonition, the need to set them right. Sometimes you need to tell someone they are wayward to help them find their way back.

And Rivka teaches that what underpins love can’t necessarily be articulated or explained. It can come from an inner conviction. From Rivka we learn that when our love is a love of virtue, that love lives on.

We might know that we love our family so much, it goes without saying. Radak’s commentary is an explanation but not an affirmation. If we love them, we should tell them, even so!

Calculating Kislev

This Friday is Rosh Chodesh, the first of the month of Kislev. The Mishna (Rosh Hashana 1:3) records Kislev as one of the six months where messengers would be sent out from the Sanhedrin in Jerusalem through the diaspora to advise of the sanctification of the New Moon; in this case, so that Channuka would be celebrated on the correct day.

Though we take the calendar very much for granted, one of its peculiarities is that Cheshvan and Kislev may each be 29 or 30 days long.

Accordingly, until the determination in Jerusalem that it was either 30th Cheshvan or 1st Kislev, one couldn't know which night to light the Channukia or deep fry the latkes.

In a "regular" כסדרה year, the months alternate with Tishrei having 30 days, Cheshvan 29, Kislev 30, Tevet 29 etc. A "regular" non-leap year has 354 days. A "regular" leap year has 30 intercalated days of Adar Rishon (followed by 29 days of Adar Sheini), making 384 days.

In a "defective" חסר year, Kislev drops to 29 days, yielding years of 353 (or 383 in a leap year) days.

In a "full" שלמה year, Cheshvan gains a day and becomes 30 days long, yielding a full 355 or 385 day year.

5780 was full, 5781 defective, 5782 regular leap, 5783 will be full and 5784 a defective leap.

The adding of the days is to ensure that Yom Kippur (10th Tishrei) never falls on a Friday or a Sunday and that Hoshana Rabba (21st Tishrei) never falls on a Shabbat (which would preclude the beating of the willows).

The calculation is further complicated by trying to ensure that the "molad", anticipated first visible sliver of moon in Jerusalem is not too late in the day before Rosh Hashana.

We know that Tycho Brahe, the Danish nobleman and astronomer who provided pioneering and accurate charts of planetary motion, dying in 1601 in Prague corresponded with his contemporaries, the Maharal (d1609) and David Ganz (the Tzemach David, d1603) on matters of astronomy.

The molad, which is announced in many congregations is the projected new moon based on a precise recurring cycle of 29 days 12 hours and 44+1/18 minutes. The molad is truer to the actual occurrence of the new moon than the proclaimed Rosh Chodesh, as it does not reflect the gerrymandering of the calendar to avoid Yom Tov/Shabbat clashes. It is, nonetheless, not "true" and left unbalanced, our calendar overruns the lunar cycle by two hours every 19 years or almost one day every 216 years.

Tuesday 9th November is the Anniversary of the Kristallnacht, Hitler's 1938 pogrom against the Jews.

1751 Astronomy Tables of R' Issachar Ber Carmoly, Physician, Astronomer and Mathematician

Under the pretext of spontaneous revulsion at the assassination of the German diplomat Ernst vom Rath by the seventeen year old Polish German Jewish refugee Herschl Grynszpan, the Nazis unleashed a night of terror. Ninety-one Jews were killed, 30,000 seized and sent to prison/concentration camps. Two hundred and sixty-seven shuls and several thousand shops were destroyed. Torah scrolls, books and property were burned. Countless innocents were brutalised and humiliated.

For the beleaguered Jewish communities, this marked a profound escalation of hostility, where victims were punished and even compelled to pay for the clean-up. For the German or citizens of occupied Austria and the Sudetenland, Kristallnacht signalled that violence against Jews was sanctioned and encouraged. They would not be protected. They were subjects. They were objects. But they no longer enjoyed the most basic rights of citizens.

We call on Hashem to open the eyes of those who do not apprehend the escalation of stereotyping into scapegoating, into vilification, into dehumanization and demonization; from taunting to humiliation, from beating to bloodshed; from the banning of ideas, to the burning of books and of property to the burning of families; from the laws of Nuremberg to the lawlessness of Kristallnacht and the genocide of six million.

We must be mindful to call out and uproot other forms of racism and discrimination within society and indeed, within the Jewish community.
