The Land of Israel – Leora and Harry Salter

This week's Parasha, Shelach, is mainly about the 12 spies entering the Land of Israel and coming back to the Bnei Yisrael with their report of the Land. As we know, 10 of the spies returned with negative reports of the Land of Israel.

When Moshe sent the 12 representatives on their way, it says:

וַיִּדְבֹּר ה' אֶל־מֹשֶׁה לֵאמֹר: שְׁלַח־לְךָ אַנְשִׁים וַיְתִירוּ אֶת־אֶרֶץ כְּנָעַן אֲשֶׁר־אֲנִי נֹתֵן לְבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל אִישׁ אֶחָד אִישׁ אֶחָד לְמִטֵּה אָבֹתָיו תִּשְׁלָחוּ כָל נָשִׂיא בָהֶם:

‘And Hashem spoke to Moshe saying: “Send men to scout the land of Canaan, which I am giving to the Israelite people; send one man from each of their ancestral tribes, each one a chieftain among them.”

The verb used here is ‘תִּיר’ ‘to seek, to spy.’ This is the most common verb used in the story of the spies. As a result of their negative report of the Land of Israel, the Bnei Yisrael were doomed to wander in the wilderness for forty years and entry into the Land of Israel was deferred while they underwent a process of education to ensure that they were worthy of entering the Promised Land.

Later on in the Parasha, we are told about the Mitzvah of Tzitzit. The Torah says:

וְהָיָה לָכֶם לְצִיצִת וּרְאִיתֶם אֹתוֹ וּזְכַרְתֶּם אֶת־כָּל־מִצְוֹת ה' וַעֲשִׂיתֶם אֹתָם וְלֹא־תִתְּיוּ אַחֲרֵי לְבַבְכֶּם וְאַחֲרֵי עֵינֵיכֶם אֲשֶׁר־אֲתֶם זִנִּים אַחֲרֵיהֶם:

‘That shall be your fringe; look at it and recall all the commandments of the LORD and observe them, so that you do not follow your heart and eyes in your lustful urge.’

The verb ‘תִּיר’ appears again in the sense ‘to wonder.’ By using the same verb the Torah is telling us that Tzitzit is the corrective to the failure of the spies. Tzitzit is a concrete reminder to not wander like the scouts of the Bnei Yisrael did.

Even today as people look upon Israel in a negative way, the Torah gives us signs and reminders to what is the good and bad in life. We shouldn't look at Israel and the Land of Israel starting with a negative eye and Tzitzit and other signs are a constant reminder to not get confused or carried away by all that our eyes see.

Light, Focus & Composition

I recently uploaded some photographs to a Facebook album. I am no Rankin or David Bailey, but I have long enjoyed the hobby. Through a childhood watching the Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau and David Attenborough's Life on Earth through to his more political and environmental contemporary output, I have been captivated by wildlife and relish photo and film. I make an annual pilgrimage to the Wildlife Photographer of the Year exhibition and cherish the artistry of those who can capture a moment or a mood.

One of the online comments to my album suggested that I should consider switching from Rabbi to Photographer. What tantalising ambiguity! Was that a judgement on the quality of my rabbinate or on the quality of my photos?

Indeed, I believe that both profession and pastime share a common thread – sharing the beauty and wonder of Creator and Creation. Marvelling at the distant and expansive heavens brought closer with a telephoto lens or the tiny details of an insect magnified a thousand times is a spiritual encounter. מה רבו מעשיו ה' כלם בחכמה עשית (Tehillim 104,24) How great/diverse/wondrous/numerous are your creations, Oh Lord; each made with wisdom, the earth abounds with Your possessions.

The different translations of רבו reflect several commentators' interpretations of the word and the nuances of magnificence they have chosen to highlight.

Our Parasha of Shelach Lecha is the Torah's instructive message about faithful and nuanced reporting, where we focus our lens and the perspective we present.

Moshe has sent the meraglim (twelve spies) out with a mission to report back on the land, its geography, its population and its bounty; which they do. Indeed, each confirms its beauty. All but Joshua and Caleb present an account of inaccessibility. "It devours its inhabitants... The men are of great size... We looked like grasshoppers in our eyes, and so we must have looked to them." (Bemidbar 13, 32-33) On the same facts,

Caleb's optimistic conclusion (13, 30) is that "we shall surely overcome."

Caleb was an independent thinker.

Rashi cites a midrash from Sotah 34b on their mission (commentary to v13, 22) וַיַּעֲלוּ בְנֵי בְנֵי אֱדִי-חֶבְרוֹן וַיָּבֹא עַד-חֶבְרוֹן, noting that "they (plural) went up into the Negev and he (singular) came to Hebron." The change from plural (used everywhere else in the narrative) to singular suggests that one of them (and Caleb is designated as the "he") made a personal detour to the holy shrine of our ancestors. Did he take off on a sightseeing frolic of his own? Perhaps, they journeyed in one party, but, whereas they saw the geography only he found the personal connection.

This week, I have been delighted to be in touch with two distinguished foreign correspondents, whose lenses on world affairs shape public opinion and government policies. I look forward to welcoming both to Kinloss.

Tim Marshall's "The Power of Geography" has just been released. He is an international and diplomatic commentator for Sky, BBC & LBC. Over the years and over the recent weeks, Tim Marshall has been robust in his unveiling of the anti-Semitism behind anti-Zionism. His recent book follows "Prisoners of Geography", where he looks at how the lay of the land affects regional and global politics. Tim will be joining us in the autumn.

Hella Pick CBE came to England on the Kindertransport. She covered UN and American affairs for the Guardian, reporting on the Kennedy assassination and during the Nixon years; she was a Cold War correspondent in Moscow and the biographer of Simon Wiesenthal. At 92 continues to contribute to think tanks on international and strategic affairs. I will be talking to her about her fascinating, just-published memoir "Invisible Walls" on Sunday July 4 (Time and possible live venue to be confirmed).

Wishing you Shabbat Shalom, Chodesh Tov and good health in the sunshine.
