Yosef HaTzaddik – The Non-Patriarch

Last week Yaakov wrestled with the symbolic angel of his destiny and we stepped into the palace of the Amida. Elokay Avraham, Elokay Yitzchak v’ Elokay Yaakov – We considered Hashem’s unique relationship with each of the forefathers, His unique relationship with each one of us.

Avraham was a believer, who was promised a son and inheritance. He followed Hashem, ready even, to sacrifice his son and inheritor on an altar. Yitzchak was prepared to lie on the altar, to be sacrificed if Hashem so commanded. Yaakov, had faith that the birthright, blessings and inheritance were his; but if the hand of destiny needed to be cajoled into realising his favour, then his own intervention, hard bargaining, and even deception might be called for.

Parshat Vayeshev introduces the story of a man driven by destiny – the story of Yosef. Unlike the previous three generations, though, Yosef will not inherit alone. He will inherit with his brothers. Moreover, while Yosef might be seen as the protagonist of the next three parshiyot, the sceptre of dominion will ultimately be accorded to Yehuda in whom we see the greater transformation and character development.

We are told of Yosef that he was handsome, that he was a genius, that he was a visionary... and that his brothers hated him for it. His favoured status at home and his arrogant self-assuredness saw him alienated, abducted and then exiled. Yosef is both visionary and victim. He is a leader of men and sees them bowing down before him, their sheaves deferential to his sheaf, their stars to his stars. It was Hashem’s own truth and Yosef was right. Nonetheless, his dizzy dreams were hardly music to his brothers’ ears. He told them he would rise above them all and their first thought was to kill him.

The Yaakov story could be paraphrased as our hero trying to manipulate his way into what he believed was his role in Hashem’s grand scheme of things. The Yosef story sees the hero manipulated – cast aside by his brothers, sold as a slave, and imprisoned on trumped up charges. The grand scheme of things seems to outmanoeuvre destiny at every corner. And yet, with the inevitability of a Greek Tragedy or the predictability of an Andrew Lloyd Webber musical, destiny is realised, and the dream comes true.

What is most baffling is that despite everything, Yosef seems unfazed. He wanders into the wilderness to the brothers he knows loathe him without apparent concern. He lets them seize him and sell him without uttering a word. Yosef is introduced to us as a brag and a tell-tale but in the pit and in prison there is no protest. Surely, he should cry out! Warn them of their folly? Remind them of their place – Insist on his innocence. Instead he succumbs in silence.

It is all part of the Yosef paradox... and it carries on – We have three whole parshiyot of plots and subplots till he is reconciled with all his family. They deceive him, he deceives them; he tricks them, he traps them... and at the end, when they apologise and he could gloat at his triumphant ascendancy, he says in all humility; you must understand – we did nothing but act out our designated roles. No-one is accountable. Hashem was behind it all.

So why, then, is Yosef called Yosef HaTzaddik – “the Righteous”?

The Yosef story is not about accepting fate and the suffering of the righteous (which is a theme of the Book of Job). The Yosef story is about addressing the tension and the temptations. Tempted by Potiphar’s wife, Yosef knows not to succumb. Able to astound prisoners and Pharaoh that he can interpret dreams, Yosef doesn’t rush to claim supernatural powers; he correctly attributes revelation to Hashem.

Like Avraham, he brings Hashem into the conversation. Like Yitzchak, he follows his father’s instructions though it takes him to the very point of death. Like Yaakov, Yosef must hold his own against powerful enemies within his family and outside. Going further than Yaakov, Yosef even wins over the brothers who sought to kill him and becomes their patron and chaperone.

Ultimately, of course, Yosef is reabsorbed into the family (bnei Yisrael). Yehuda is promised dominion. Parashat Vayechi is about the death and blessings of Yaakov or Yisrael. Herein “Yosef HaTzaddik”. He is not the message but the faithful, conscientious and persistent messenger. Yosef lives his life as a facilitator – not for himself, but for the greater glory of Israel and the greater glory of God.

Shabbat Shalom, R’ Jeremy Lawrence

The Chaya Ra'a – and a Journey from Malignant darkness to Positive Light.

As Yosef's brothers conspire to dispatch him, they contrive (Bereshit 37:20):

וְעַתָּה לְכֹוּ וְנִהְרָגְהוּ וְנִשְׁלָלְהוּ בְּאֶחָד הַבְּרוֹת וְאִמְרְנוּ חַיָּה רָעָה אֲכָלָתוֹ וְנִרְאָה מִהֲיָיו חֲלֹמֶתִי:
“Come now, let us kill him and throw him into one of the pits; and we can say, ‘A savage beast (Chaya Ra’a) devoured him.’ We shall see what comes of his dreams!”

R' Yehuda Henkin (d Dec 2020) notes that the brothers realised the importance of stipulating the Chaya Ra'a, not just as a convenient version of events, but because it would help Yaakov's mourning process to label the actuality and cause of Yosef's death. It was a perverse Chessed to prevent him from wondering whether Yosef might have survived, might be wounded and alone, might sometime return.

Chaya Ra'a literally translates as “malignant lifeform”. Not so long ago Cancer was mentioned in a whisper, given the euphemism “Big C”. Like Voldemort, people dared not speak its name. In many respects, that has changed. Cancer is less stigmatised. It is addressed in public warnings against smoking. In Australia, we were warned, “a suntan is skin cells in trauma!”

We learn new terminologies, malignant and benign; radio- and chemo-; therapeutic and palliative; we distinguish between the cancers one might die with and those one might die from... When the Chaya Ra'a enters your life, what do you tell to whom and how? As well as the patient who needed treatment, fears and uncertainties beset whole families.

Within our community, Chai Cancer Care assumes the mantle of information, protection and support.

In conjunction with their matched fundraising drive this weekend, I spoke to their fundraising executive, Caroline Tunkel.

Chai has a pressing need. Over the last couple of years they have seen an increased demand of 32% in counselling and other services. One factor in this is the late diagnosis and missed or delayed screening for cancers because of Covid.

Chai directly connects with over 3,500 individuals, occasionally three generations of the same family “from 3 to 93!”. They provide support in 23 schools addressing whole classes or assisting the one Jewish student who needs help.

Chai operates in eleven centres across the UK and provides 65 specialised services; counselling, complementary therapies, physiotherapy music therapy relationship counselling... Recently, they have found success with pet therapy, as especially trained dogs are brought in to calm the anxious.

When Covid hit, complimentary therapies were forced to stop. Fortunately, Chai already had a system of Skype counselling and was able to take many individual and group sessions – even manual lymphatic drainage (MLD) directly into family homes, online. The online groups also enabled patients and contacts in Leeds, Manchester and Birmingham to join together.

“The most important thing,” says Caroline is “knowledge of Chai”, so that people know where we are and how to contact us. It's helpful to be able to say to anxious friends and relatives, “I'll be there with you, when you call Chai”, or “I'll be your support.” She is proud to be involved “because there are so many people we can help on their cancer journey.”

Chai's services are free - but cost £3½ million per annum. On Sunday and Monday, there is a matched funding campaign to raise £1.8 million.

Our enterprising member, Ian Kamiel, has recently become Chai's senior fundraising manager. He is proud to be involved with Chai. “Chai is a remarkable organisation. It cares so deeply about each and every one of its clients and their loved ones, always trying to bring positivity and light into people's lives.”

You can access more information on Chai and its services on <https://chaicancercare.org/> and can donate directly by scanning the QR code.

Channuka begins on Sunday evening. Candles should be lit as soon as possible after dark (4.36pm Sunday).

Candles should continue to burn for at least ½ an hour.

The festival commemorates both the passion of Mattityahu and the Maccabees, enjoining community engagement to liberate Israel from its enemies and also the miracle of the oil, where Hashem endowed us with greater resources than we thought physically possible.

May He continue to bless our endeavours from darkness to light.
