How might clothes “make the man?”

“And you shall make sacred garments for Aharon your brother, for kavod and tiferet.” (Shemot 28:2)

Our verse introduces the Torah’s description of the bigdei kehuna (the priestly vestments) that Aharon as the Cohen Gadol (High Priest) would wear in the Mishkan desert sanctuary.

I deliberately did not translate the words kavod and tiferet which usually mean ‘honour’ and ‘glory’ respectively, since they sound in English as if they mean the same.

Rabbi Ovadia Seforno (d. 1550) understands kavod to mean that the vestments were for the honour of God and their use in the Mishkan service would demonstrate this. Contrastingly, tiferet refers to the Cohen’s role as a teacher which required him to have the respect of those around him, especially his students, part of which came from his attire. Accordingly, we can understand kavod as referring to honour of God whilst tiferet refers to the respect due to a Cohen.

This is supported by a the Megilah (1:4) which describes Achashvairosh as showing off ‘tiferet gedulato’, ‘the glory of his [personal] greatness’ at the party which he made for the officials of his empire. The Midrash, (Esther Raba chapter 2), compares our verse about Aharon’s vestments with this verse in the Megilah, demonstrating that tiferet refers to human glory since tiferet is used in the Megilah to describe Achashvairosh’s ostentatious behaviour in emphasising his own personal glory.

Furthermore, reading the whole of that verse from the Megilah also reveals a reference to kavod, namely that Achashvairosh showed off the wealth of ‘kevod malchuto’, the honour of his kingdom! The Talmudic sage Rabbi Yossi Ben Chanina, also compares our two verses, concluding on the basis of the phrase ‘kevod malchuto’ that Achashvairosh actually wore the bigdei kehuna at his party (Talmud Megilah 12a)!

Rashi, on our Talmudic passage, notes that the bigdei kehuna had been plundered from Jerusalem (by the Babylonians in 586 BCE who destroyed the first Temple in 586 BCE).

On this, the Sefat Emet (d. 1905), the second ‘Gerrer Rebbe’, notes that the Jews were in exile and God’s Presence appeared hidden (a point illustrated by the absence of explicit mention of God in the Megilah). Yet Achashvairosh, a human king, was taking both kavod and tiferet for himself, wearing the bigdei kehuna for his personal honour and aggrandizement only, not for the glory of God.

Clothes can indeed “make the man”. For the Cohen Gadol, clothes (in the specific form here of bigdei kehuna), showed honour for both God and the dignity of a human being. For Achashvairosh, the same clothes at his party were for his honour and a denial of God’s glory. We must emulate the Cohen Gadol’s approach in daily life.

Such a party and such a society did not bode well for the Jews in the Purim story. The lessons from our verses in both Tetzave and the Megilah should always remind us that our actions must be for both the honour of God and the dignity of ourselves and other humans.

Shabbat Shalom and happy Purim!

Avoiding Achashvirus-19

Heading into Purim, there are already many people wearing masks!

Guidance on the Coronavirus is constantly updating and there will be signage around the shul. While trying to run as much as possible as consistently as possible, the United Synagogue and all at Kinloss want to ensure the health and wellbeing of all visitors, worshippers, members and staff.

- Responsible personal hygiene is a key factor. Please do wash hands regularly and thoroughly – especially before entering the shul; after using the facilities, also before and after the kiddush.
- Please minimise handshaking and unnecessary physical contact. Be careful, sensible and respectful about personal space. The guidelines we have received request that you avoid kissing Sifrei Torah, Siddurim, Chumashim & Mezzuzot.
- Kiddush is a particularly difficult environment to maintain the optimal recommended standards. Please do not touch food unnecessarily. Do not dip crackers / veg into dips once you have already taken a bite (even ever!). Similarly, please do not put discarded food back on the serving tables.
- Striking a balance is difficult; for example, it is impossible to avoid doorhandles.

The Talmud (Chullin 106a) quotes Rav Dimi; that failing to wash hands before a meal led to someone eating pork and failing to wash afterwards led to a woman's divorce. The background stories appear in the Midrash (Bemidbar Rabba 20:21). An innkeeper living under Hadrian's Roman oppression sought to conceal his identity. When customers came and washed their hands before eating, he knew they were Jewish and served them kosher. Customers who did not wash received other meats. One day a boorish man sat to eat without washing; the innkeeper wrongly concluded he was a heathen and served him pork.

In another story (which appears in various guises), a man left from his luncheon without washing the remnants of his lentil stew from his hands. A swindler, who saw him later, went to the man's wife and asked for money, pretending he was acting on the husband's instructions. To assert his authenticity the swindler claimed, "Your husband told me that you had lentils for lunch". Returning home later and finding himself robbed, an angry scene ensued.

These stories do not teach us that frummers are clean or that messy eaters are better targets for tricksters (although the reason there are so many typos in e-scams is to immediately weed out the people who won't fall for them). The Talmud and subsequent halachic authority exhort us to maintain high standards of personal hygiene. Washing our hands is a part of our spiritual and physical wellbeing.

Dining plays a huge part in the Megilla. The Megilla opens with a party hosted by Achashverosh for his officers and then another for the residents of Shushan. Vashti also hosts a party. When Esther becomes queen, Achashverosh throws a party in her honour, which is known as Esther's banquet (Chapter 2). Esther invites the King and Haman to dinner twice Chapter 5. The second (in Chapter 7) is where Haman is unmasked. The Jews feast after their victory in Chapter 8 and the Jews of Shushan feast a day later in Chapter 9, with instruction given to have a celebratory banquet as one of the mitzvot of Purim.

The meals of the Megilla are the moments of changing fortune, where character and characters are revealed for who they really are. As we come together and celebrate as a community in the many services over the next few days, may we show ourselves to be good citizens and congregants – upholding the cleanliness that is next to godliness.

Wishing you a Shabbat Shalom and a Purim Sameach.

Looking forward to seeing you in shul and at our parties.

R' Jeremy Lawrence

Zachor: Please be particularly attentive during the leining. We will repeat Zachor at Shabbat mincha for those who could not be in shul earlier.
