This week’s Parsha is Parshat Mishpatim, which follows on from the Ten Commandments and introduces quite a large body of legislation which covers everything from murder & manslaughter, negligence & responsibility, people sold into slavery to pay their debts, core principles of the judicial system and an introduction to our Jewish festivals.

When someone is injured, the Torah prescribes five types of compensation that must be paid. These are 1) depreciation for the damage that has been caused, 2) compensation for the pain, 3) treatment, 4) loss of time or earnings and 5) degradation or embarrassment. The Talmud goes on to elaborate the sophisticated means by which the values for each of these is computed.

The expression that is used by the Parsha to establish responsibility for treatment is Shemot 21:8 וְרָפָא יִרְפָּא “Verapo yerapeh” which can be translated as, “and he paid for his complete cure” or “and make him thoroughly healed.”

From this come two very significant ideas which we quite possibly take for granted in today’s society.

A couple of weeks ago in Parshat Beshallach, Hashem had stated (Shemot 15:21) כִּי אֲנִי ה' רֹפֵאֲךָ “ki ani Hashem Rofecha”, for I am Hashem, your healer. We may have thought from this that medicine was Hashem’s exclusive domain. We may have imagined that all healing was only in his hands and that it would have be inappropriate or even heretical for us to interfere with healing. There are cultures that believe that all suffering and illness is Hashem’s will so that if you become injured or ill, the only appropriate remedy is through prayer.

Our Parsha teaches that from a Jewish perspective this is not the case. The verse, “Verapo yerapeh” immediately gives doctors the licence to practise medicine. Moreover, in as much as Hashem admits for doctors to heal, there is an implicit invitation for medical expertise and opening for medical knowledge, scientific and study. “Verapo yerapeh” This simple phrase underpins an important argument in debating how far we are able to progress in all manner of research.

The second significant idea from “Verapo Yerapeh” is that a fee for healing is billable. Of course, we take that for granted today. It is, however, noteworthy that the Torah doesn’t make the assumption that it is such a mitzvah to make people better that no-one should dream of charging for medical services! Of course, it is a mitzvah! Nonetheless, those who service and maintain the living are entitled to make a living!

In the Mishna we read that King Hezekiah concealed an important tome known as The Book of Remedies. Given that it was hidden, we don’t know exactly what it contained. According to one opinion it was a volume of medical wisdom. According to another, it contained charms, incantations and potions which would enable speedy recovery from any condition. Assuming that this was the case, the Mishna praises King Hezekiah. If as soon as you are ill, you simply apply a magical remedy, you never stop to reflect upon the fragility of your body, the responsibility to look after yourself... and for sure, you would never dream of praying for Hashem’s assistance at all.

Even though we are told to entrust medical matters to doctors, we still believe that they are partners and not solely responsible in the healing process. Ultimately, Hashem is our healer and not everything is in human hands. We reinforce this idea when we perform the mitzvah of Bikkur Cholim or visiting the sick. The mitzvah is not completed if we simply turn up in their room with chicken soup or grapes and we wish the patient better. To perform the mitzvah of Bikkur Cholim one must wish the patient that Hashem grant him or her a speedy recovery.

In it that way we bring a spiritual dimension into the simplest of kindnesses that we perform. We turn kindness into godliness, and we act in the image of Hashem.

To all of our members and friends who are in hospital or undergoing treatment this week, may Hashem grant you a refuah shalema betoch shaar cholei Yisrael, a speedy and complete recovery.

Shabbat Shalom.

Our True Worth Comes from Giving

Shabbat Shalom and Welcome.

We are particularly delighted to welcome the madrichim and team from Bnei Akiva, who are marking Shabbat Halrgun.

This week is known as Shabbat Shekalim. It is the first of four Shabbatot (Shekalim, Zachor, Parah & Hachodesh) with special Haftarot that fall around Purim and before Pesach. Shabbat Shekalim is always the Shabbat before Rosh Chodesh Adar (or Rosh Chodesh itself, when that falls on Shabbat). In a leap year it is the Shabbat before (or on) Rosh Chodesh Adar Sheini.

The Maftir of Shabbat Shekalim introduces the compulsory half shekel raised from every adult male over the age of 20, originally for the building and then for the maintenance of the Mishkan. The count of the money was used as a census.

The linking of the donation with the census also teaches two important spiritual messages. First, that rich or poor, the Tabernacle and the key communal sacrifices belonged equally to everybody.

A second message of the half shekel census is that the strength of Israel is not found in the numbers who happen to be present. It's found in the readiness of the people to give to the community. Over and above the mandatory half shekel, free-will contributions for the greater good were always both necessary and welcome.

The contribution of Bnei Akiva to the community and Klal Yisrael over the years has shown the transformative power of motivated team-work.

Many thanks to everyone who has already responded to last week's invitation to contribute towards the North West London Eruv. We're still looking to meet the £7,500 target which is readily met by a contribution of even £1 per family per week. Please do follow the link www.kinloss.org.uk/eruv after Shabbat. It is truly a fulfilment of the mitzvah of contributing to maintaining communal infrastructure as well as the mitzvah of Ve'ahavta L're-acha Kamocha ואהבת לרעך כמוך. We show love to our neighbours who would otherwise be housebound, in giving them the opportunity to get out and about to shul, to family and friends on Shabbat.

One of the most lovely features of our community is the Shabbat Luncheon Club, which tries to meet ten times a year with an interesting speaker. It is friendly and it is warm, and it is relaxed. If you would be interested in knowing the dates for luncheons ahead, please contact Rochelle in the Shul Office or ring 020 8349 5263.

In April, the law on Organ Donation is changing to an "opt out" system. Rather than the default being that one needs to declare that one is happy to become an organ donor and sign up for it, the default presumption will be that one is happy to be a donor. One will need to take active steps to declare a preference not to donate. The change in the law makes this an area we have to think about. Many of us have already considered it and would like to be able to give someone who is ailing the chance for life. Dayan Gelley briefed the Rabbis on the latest local developments at the Rabbinic Council Conference on Tuesday. It could not have been better timed. I will be addressing the topic on Monday evening at 8pm at the home of Mark & Eleanor. Please be in touch with the Office for address details.

Our true worth is what we are willing to share with others (attributed to Moses Montefiore). Whether we give our time, our money or perhaps even a kidney, our community is strengthened and enriched by our giving. Shabbat Shekalim is an annual reminder that we must be giving people and that the community, and its future, belongs equally to us all.

Shabbat Shalom
