Acquire for thyself a friend – Leora and Harry Salter

Parashat Bamidbar consists of many events including a censuses in which most of Am Yisrael are counted. We also learn important details regarding the infrastructure of the camp of Am Yisrael and how the people, as well as the specific groups within Am Yisrael, function together.

The people were divided into four groups, each consisting of 3 tribes that surrounded the Mishkan. Whilst 9 tribes made up the outer perimeter of the Mishkan, Moshe, Aharon and the 3 Levite families – Gershon, Kehat and Merari, formed a layer around the Mishkan. Rashi comments that the positioning of each tribe is significant, for example, the tribes that were nearest to Moshe and Aharon were more likely you are to be scholarly. Rashi notes that the tribes of Yehuda, Yisachar and Zevulun all became scholars because of their location adjacent to Moshe and Aharon.

This also works in the negative sense too. In a few weeks' time we will read the story of Korach who was from the Levite family of Kehat, who camped adjacent to the tribe of Reuven. Rav Milston, Rosh Midrasha at Midreshet Harova, comments that even though Judaism believes in free choice and individualism in the sense that we all have the availability to choose our actions, we can still be influenced by those we choose to associate ourselves with.

One of the most important decisions that a person can make is the choice of community that they are part of. We have the right to choose what people we want to be friends with and what type of community we want to shape.

As the Passuk in Proverbs says (12:26): A righteous person gives his friend direction, but the way of the wicked leads astray. Rashi comments that a righteous person is more generous than his neighbour, whilst a wicked person who is accustomed to harming will lead people astray.

In Sefer Bamidbar we see the importance of community and associations with people. As the Mishnah in Avot says (1:6) Rabbi Yehoshua Ben Parchiah teaches that one must acquire for thyself a friend. We have a responsibility to ensure that our community is the best it can be, caring for each other and increasing our interpersonal skills and Avodat Hashem to influence people in the best way possible and continue to be righteous people.

Security and Sacrifice

The conversation with Nadia Cohen made me rethink heroism. One of my treasured Bar Mitzvah presents had been a book on The Mossad.

Little rivalled the story of the young Egyptian-born Israeli agent, who posed as a flamboyant nationalist and insinuated himself into the highest echelons of Syrian society. His intelligence gave Israel insights into the players in the turbulent Syrian regime, details on its rearmament, eyewitness infiltration of the secure positions in the Golan and warning of a project to bleed Israel dry through cutting water supply to the Kinneret. A tragic end; he was captured and hanged in public on May 18th 1965.

Eli Cohen's contribution to Israel's intelligence was of incalculable value in Israel's victory in the Six Day War. Next chapter. Next sensational story...

But for his widow, Nadia, the Eli Cohen story is not over.

Despite international protests his tortured body remains in an undisclosed grave in Syria. The memory of Eli that has captured the public imagination through film and the recent Netflix mini-series has been distorted by the writers who have "sexed it up". On his final secret visit home, he was pressurised to return to Syria and almost certain capture and death. He had wanted to cut the mission and return home to live with his young wife and three children, all born while he was operational overseas.

From the late 1950s through the last 70 years, Nadia, unsupported, has borne the loss. His historic sacrifice is marked by plazas and street names. Her sacrifice continues.

As Nadia campaigns to build the Eli Cohen Museum in Herzliya, her contribution and strength of character shine a light on history's hidden heroes.

Armies routinely send soldiers into the front line and on missions with scant, if any, prospect of return. Within the Tanach, we have copious accounts of valour and danger. Ignobly, King David, (2 Samuel, 11) infatuated by Bathsheva sent her husband, Uriyah the Hittite to the front lines and death. One can volunteer to serve, but is one allowed to volunteer for a probable suicide mission?

Familiar general principals are that while there is a duty to rescue another, one should not endanger one's life for another, that each life is worth a world and we should live by the commandments, not die by them.

In Megillat Esther, Mordechai challenges an apprehensive Esther to risk her life and go to the king unsummoned to plead for her people. The Talmud Yerushalmi records that Reish Lakish went to rescue Rav Imi, who was being held captive, proclaiming, "Either I kill them, or they will kill me." The Radvaz (3:627) describes risking one's life for a friend as foolish piety. Rav Moshe Feinstein (YD2:147.4) holds that while there is no mitzvah to enter into danger, but one may choose to.

Within military conflict, the parameters are possibly different. Individuality is lost as groups of soldiers become units. How do we weigh the Nation? Is it a collective of individuals, each worth a universe, or does it have an even higher conceptual worth? National defence (or a Milchemet Mitzvah) might empower the Prophet/Sanhedrin and their successors to act with a הוראת שעה, a temporary imperative, overriding normative halacha.

Such is the line taken in a Teshuva of Rav Kook (Mishpat Cohen 143), endorsing the view that while it is not appropriate for an individual to choose to sacrifice himself for another, and while there is no halachic obligation to sacrifice himself for a group, חיובא ליכא והיתרא איכא, it is within one's discretion. He opines that security of Klal Yisrael certainly warrants placing individuals at certain risk and that the circumstances do not require the הוראת שעה to come from a Prophet or Bet Din. It becomes a matter for command.

It is with apprehension that we enter this weekend and into Shavuot. Friends and family are in shelters. Friends and family are in uniform. Friends and family are being sent into harm's way. Some will be ordered. Some will volunteer. Some acts of courage are open, some recognised. In the fields of conflict, some heroism and sacrifice go unnoticed. And as Nadia Cohen reminded us this week, as well as celebrating valour in the field, we must recognize our debt for the sacrifice and loss of the families bereft at home.

אַחֲיֵינוּ כָּל בֵּית יִשְׂרָאֵל, הַנְּתוּנִים בְּצָרָה וּבִשְׁבִּיָּה, הָעוֹמְדִים בֵּין בָּיִם וּבֵין בִּיבְשָׁה, הַמְּקוּם יָרֵחַם עֲלֵיהֶם, וְיוֹצִיאֵם מִצָּרָה לְרוֹחָה, וּמֵאֲפֵלָה לְאוֹרָה, וּמִשְׁעָבִיד לְגֵאֲלָה, הַשְׁתָּא בְּעֶגְלָא וּבְזֶמַן קָרִיב, וְנֹאמַר אָמֵן.

May Hashem protect our brothers, the whole family of Israel, who are delivered into distress and captivity, stationed at sea or on land. May He bring them from distress to relief, from darkness to light, from constraint to redemption, speedily and in our days. And let us say, Amen.

Shabbat Shalom and Chag Sameach

BRIEF TIMINGS GUIDELINES FOR THE FIRST NIGHT OF SHAVUOT, SUNDAY 16 MAY 2021 BY RABBI MICHAEL LAITNER

OPTION 1

- 1) Mincha at 7.10pm.
- 2) Maariv at the earliest to be recited after 'plag hamincha' which is at 7.15pm.
- 3) Then either make kiddush, hamotzi and eat Yom Tov dinner straight after Maariv or wait until sunset at 8.48pm to do so.

OPTION 2

- 1) Mincha at 8.45pm, followed in shul by a short shiur.
- 2) Maariv at 9.08pm, which is twenty minutes after sunset.
- 3) Make kiddush, hamotzi and a Yom Tov dinner straight after Maariv. Even if you ate earlier in the evening, you should not just eat dessert at this point, but have some main course food at this time in honour of Yom Tov, even if it is something light such a piece of pizza or some sushi!
- 4) Nightfall is at 9.40pm for those who are accustomed to wait until nightfall to make kiddush.
