THE KIDS' MINYAN 10:45am
in the Newman Room, Yrs 5 and 6

In the Parsha this week, God commanded Aharon (Aaron): "When you enter the Ohel Moed (Tent of Meeting), neither you nor your descendants may drink wine or any other intoxicant" (Lev. 10:9). This raises the obvious question, why are the kohanim forbidden to drink wine before serving in the Beit HaMikdash (Temple)?

I once came across an explanation from the Dubno Maggid in the form of a parable: A recent graduate from medical school was looking for a promising town to settle and start his practice. In his searches, he came across another young man who was also looking to start a new business. The second man had just finished his studies at a well-known culinary institute, and wanted to open his own bakery.

The newly minted doctor took a liking to the young baker and suggested: Let us search together for the right place to settle down. After all, "Two are better than one"?

The baker, however, disagreed. "You are a nice fellow, but we are better off going in separate ways. You see, we are looking for very different types of places. You need a town where there are many sick people who will require your services. I, on the other hand, need a place where the people are healthy and have a good appetite so that they will buy my cakes, pastries, and bread."

Thus, we can understand the Torah prohibition. The Temple and wine serve opposite functions. The holy Temple refines and elevates the soul. Wine, on the other hand, can intoxicate and degrade one who drinks too much. Despondent people might even attempt to self-medicate and misuse alcohol as a band-aid to dull bitterness, stress and pain.

Like the doctor and the baker, wine and the Beit HaMikdash serve opposite functions; so they need to be separated.

The Rabbi Writes

Welcome back to everyone who was away over Pesach. Many thanks to everyone here who assisted with the services. We had a lovely Yom Tov.

As I write, we are heading into Yom HaShoah. This year's commemoration is particularly poignant. There are fewer eyewitnesses and survivors with us to tell of their experiences. Alongside other manifestations of anti-Semitism, there has been a marked growth in the peddling of Holocaust Denial literature. Most particularly, with reference to Jeremy Corbyn and the Labour Party, I don't recall ever having heard so many people suggest that "It is like 1933 all over again!"

The comparison is based on an improbable, once-thought unelectable leader; populism and a readiness to be blind to, and worse, endorsing of, repetitive anti-Semitic tropes.

I just don't know!

Over Yizkor I was thinking about my grandparents, who were in Berlin in 1933. What would they make of the comparison, or of Jeremy Corbyn? With hindsight, so much of the error of yesteryear was to underestimate and play down the danger. However, some suggest that our acute sensibilities are too finely tuned.

There are so many differences to the wider picture, including the existence and protection of Israel. Nonetheless, the readiness of notional liberals both in their institutions and in their droves to discriminate against Jews and against the Middle East's only liberal democracy should ring alarm bells. It is right that our community is protesting.

Remembrance, itself, is partly the act of recalling an event in the past. We mourn its victims and celebrate its heroes. Our Seder service goes further. We are supposed to feel and identify. The mitzvah of Pesach is to have each participant appreciate that without the plagues and Hashem's intervention, we and our children would still be enslaved to Pharaoh.

The Seder is not solely about the events of yesteryear – it is about the present day and about the future, contextualised by our reliving and retelling of the past. Eating the Hillel sandwich is our way of tying our observance with the words and deeds of a survivor of his era – of recapturing and evoking his memory of a lost world, and of embracing his way of coping.

As we move through our calendar into Yom HaShoah and then Yom HaZikaron and Yom HaAtzmaut, may we pay heed to the remaining survivors of the era and the pioneering builders of Israel. We should take every opportunity to listen to their voices and study their writings. For us, remembrance is incorporating our collective story into our personal memory.

I congratulate Barry Colman on arranging another Survivor Dinner (next Shabbat) for the youth. Please do join our upcoming celebrations of Israel with the Yom HaAtzmaut evening service and the Zionist Visionaries course in May.

Shabbat Shalom

I put out a couple of table quiz sheets for your Sedarim. Herewith the answers:

The first was the 10 Plagues

The second were the 15 stages in Dayeynu

- a) Firstborn (First Bourne), b) Exit from Egypt, c) Manna (To the Manor Born), d) Shabbat (Black Sabbath), e) Supplied our needs, f) Given us Wealth, g) Split the Sea (Split C), h) Walked on Dry Land, i) Temple (station), k) Drowned oppressors, l) Judged our enemies, m) Torah, n) Judged Idols, o) Israel (Rugby player Israel Folau), p) Mount Sinai (Hospital Ambulance)

Through Pesach I have started to put out a series of short videos on the 48 Modes of acquiring Torah Wisdom from the 6th Chapter of Pirkei Avot, known as Perek Kinyanei HaTorah.

All of the above, together with other recent Divrei Torah and materials are on the new and revamped Kinloss Website. My page is <http://www.kinloss.org.uk/rabbi-lawrences-weekly-messages-and-divrei-torah>

THIS WEEK'S HAFTORAH BY RABBI ANDREWS

This week's Haftorah (II Samuel 6:1-7:17) can be split into three distinct parts. First, there is the story of King David attempting to bring the returned Aron (Ark) to the capital, Ir David (the City of David). Upon Uza's demise as he reached to touch the Aron, David's initiative is temporarily halted and the Aron diverted to the home of Oved Edom. Only after reassurance does David bring the Aron to the Ir David with great celebration.

The second part of the Haftorah records David's interaction with his wife Michal, who expresses horror at his undignified celebration. David replied that he would gladly be even less dignified when it comes to celebrating before God.

Third, we have the discussion between David and Natan about building a more permanent structure to serve as a House of God. That night, Natan had a prophecy informing him that his enthusiastic endorsement of the project was in error. He returns the following morning to David to recant.

The theme of the death of celebrants at dedicatory ceremonies offers the simplest connection between the haftarah and the Torah reading. Nadav and Avihu in the Torah die in the parsha while Uza shares their fate in the Haftorah.

If you find yourself at Kinloss over the course of the day, please stop by the office to say hello! I can usually be found there during the regular office hours (except Thursday).

SPECIAL FESTIVE BREAKFAST

FILM CLUB

MONDAY 16TH APRIL 2018, 2:00PM FOR A 2:15PM START

We will be screening "CAST A GIANT SHADOW" (1966)

In this fact-based film, distinguished US Army Col. David Marcus (Kirk Douglas) is enlisted by the Israelis to perform the difficult task of preparing their fledgling nation for battle against the Arabs. Before long, he feuds with the local leaders, quits his post and goes back home to his pregnant wife (Angie Dickinson) in the United States. However, Marcus, who is Jewish himself, soon has a crisis of faith and decides to return to duty to help the untrained Israelis form an army.
