How might clothes “make the man?” by Rabbi Michael Laitner

“And you shall make sacred garments for Aharon your brother, for kavod and tiferet.” (Shemot 28:2)
Our verse introduces the Torah’s description of the bigdei kehuna (the priestly vestments) that Aharon as the Cohen Gadol (High Priest) would wear in the Mishkan desert sanctuary.

I deliberately did not translate the words kavod and tiferet which usually mean ‘honour’ and ‘glory’ respectively, since they sound in English as if they mean the same.

Rabbi Ovadia Seforno (d. 1550) understands kavod to mean that the vestments were for the honour of God and their use in the Mishkan service would demonstrate this. Contrastingly, tiferet refers to the Cohen’s role as a teacher which required him to have the respect of those around him, especially his students, part of which came from his attire. Accordingly, we can understand kavod as referring to honour of God whilst tiferet refers to the respect due to a Cohen.

This is supported by a the Megilah (1:4) which describes Achashvairosh as showing off ‘tiferet gedulato’, ‘the glory of his [personal] greatness’ at the party which he made for the officials of his empire. The Midrash, (Esther Raba chapter 2), compares our verse about Aharon’s vestments with this verse in the Megilah, demonstrating that tiferet refers to human glory since tiferet is used in the Megilah to describe Achashvairosh’s ostentatious behaviour in emphasising his own personal glory. Furthermore, reading the whole of that verse from the Megilah also reveals a reference to kavod, namely that Achashvairosh showed off the wealth of ‘kevod malchuto’, the honour of his kingdom! The Talmudic sage Rabbi Yossi Ben Chanina, also compares our two verses, concluding on the basis of the phrase ‘kevod malchuto’ that Achashvairosh actually wore the bigdei kehuna at his party (Talmud Megilah 12a)!

Rashi, on our Talmudic passage, notes that the bigdei kehuna had been plundered from Jerusalem (by the Babylonians in 586 BCE who destroyed the first Temple in 586 BCE).

On this, the Sefat Emet (d. 1905), the second ‘Gerrer Rebbe’, notes that the Jews were in exile and God’s Presence appeared hidden (a point illustrated by the absence of explicit mention of God in the Megilah). Yet Achashvairosh, a human king, was taking both kavod and tiferet for himself, wearing the bigdei kehuna for his personal honour and aggrandizement only, not for the glory of God.

Clothes can indeed “make the man”. For the Cohen Gadol, clothes (in the specific form here of bigdei kehuna), showed honour for both God and the dignity of a human being. For Achashvairosh, the same clothes at his party were for his honour and a denial of God’s glory. We must emulate the Cohen Gadol’s approach in daily life.

Such a party and such a society did not bode well for the Jews in the Purim story. The lessons from our verses in both Tetzave and the Megilah should always remind us that our actions must be for both the honour of God and the dignity of ourselves and other humans.

Shabbat Shalom, happy Purim and happy Shushan Purim!

We may Rule our Empires. Do we Rule Ourselves?

Purim is a fun festival with a fabulous array of colourful characters. The Megilla is a tale of love and intrigue, villainy, victory and the overthrow of a tyrant. While we boo Haman, a character presented with no redeeming features, the rest of the Megilla's cast are not as easily pigeonholed as purely heroic or purely villainous.

Some sages criticise Mordechai for being unnecessarily antagonistic towards Haman in refusing to bow. Others question how he and Esther could have become involved in setting up a royal marriage to a heathen king.

In the Megilla itself, Vashti is presented as a rebel against the King's authority and as a victim of his drunken whim. The Midrashim present her as a cruel and sadistic mistress over her slaves, but they also explain the difficult relationship between King and Queen.

So, who is Achashverosh?

King Achashverosh is the man introduced to us right at the beginning of the Megilla. It says Vayhi biymay Achashverosh – hu Achashverosh hamolech miHodu ve-ad Kush. It happened in the days of Achashverosh; this is the Achashverosh who ruled from India to Ethiopia – 127 provinces.

The Midrash asks why the Megilla needs to repeat his name and clarify who he is.

R' Yehuda explains, this is to indicate that it is the same Achashverosh whose story begins with him killing his wife on the advice of his advisor and whose story ends with him killing his advisor on the advice of his wife.

R' Nechemia suggests, this is to indicate that it is the same Achashverosh whose story begins with him rejoicing in the destruction of the Temple and whose story ends with the circumstances that paved the way for return and rebuilding.

The Midrash is telling us that Achashverosh is the pivotal character. We need to understand that the changes in him shape our people's destiny.

So, who was Achashverosh?

Achashverosh was not born to be king. He was a career soldier and was not even of noble birth. By contrast, Vashti is the granddaughter of Nebuchadnezzar who sacked the Temple and the daughter of Belshazzar. She has royal blood. Achashverosh came to the throne through a coup and married her to secure some legitimacy. His desire that she dance at the party was a mean way of humiliating her and showing that he now had the upper hand. In the Talmud, Vashti objects and taunts him by reminding him that he was her father's stable boy. And, to add insult to injury she says that her father was able to hold his drink a whole lot better!

Now we understand better why the king is told that Vashti must be removed from court.

It is not simply the sexist concern that wives will disobey their husbands; it's the fear that those loyal to the old regime will see her defiance as a call to rise up, depose the king and restore Vashti's royal family and its followers to power.

Achashverosh starts as weak and boorish. He is insecure, anxious to assert himself and easily led. It is the same Achashverosh who ends our Megilla. His rule is secure. He is better advised. Now, he shows discernment and compassion.

We all know that the Megilla is about the hidden hand of God and the courage of Mordechai and Esther. As our sages explain, it is also a lesson in personal development.

We should aspire to be honest as friends and true in our relationships. From humble beginnings to exultant endings... May we live happily ever after.

From 27 February-1 March, CST is hosting a crowdfunding campaign called 'Together We Protect'. Jewish people across the UK will visit a campaign website and donate to CST. Each donation will be matched from a special fund which will encourage people to give, and see their donations doubled. The objective of the campaign is for everyone – young and old – to come together to support CST. It is our joint responsibility to ensure the security of our Jewish community.

CST's work allows Jewish people in the UK to live vibrant, safe and secure Jewish lives with confidence. Securing shuls, schools and events - wherever Jews gather together - CST is there to provide reassurance and protection.

Finchley United Synagogue has always worked in close partnership with CST to create a safe and secure environment for our community. CST provides funding for security enhancements, training to our security volunteers and keeps a watchful eye over us from its 24/7 National Security Control Centre. CST never charges for anything it does and depends on charitable donations to survive.

CST is not 'just another charity' but is part of the very fabric of our community and so, at Finchley United Synagogue, we are delighted to support this campaign.

So, from Saturday evening 27 February, please visit the Together We Protect website, browse to the Finchley United Synagogue page and give generously. Let's join together to protect CST, just as they have protected us over many years.
